Enhancing Human Security:
Developing Capacities to Protect and Assist Victims of Human Trafficking
Seogwipo City, Jeju Province, Republic of Korea
March 28(Wed) – 30(Fri) 2012

Event Background and Introduction

Human trafficking, the largest slave trade in history, is a crime against humanity that poses perennial threats to human security. It involves an act of recruiting, transporting, transferring, harbouring or receiving a person through the use of force, coercion or other means, for the purpose of exploiting them. As such, it is an outright violation of human rights. Every year, thousands of men, women and children fall into the hands of traffickers, in their own countries and abroad. Every country in the world is affected by trafficking, whether as a country of origin, transit or destination for victims.

Not only is human trafficking the fastest growing form of transnational crime according to the UNODC(United Nations Office on Drugs and Crimes), research by the U.S. Department of State estimates that 600,000 to 800,000 men, women, and children are trafficked across international borders each year. Despite the magnitude of victims, experience has demonstrated that victims are reluctant to come to the authorities for a number of reasons: fear of reprisal, trauma and shame, lack of trust, and lack of information on available assistance.

The UN Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power recommends measures to be taken on behalf of victims of crime at the international, regional and national levels to improve access to justice and fair treatment, restitution, compensation and assistance. In addition, the UN's Trafficking in Persons Protocol specifically addresses the need for comprehensive and coordinated intervention to protect victims of human trafficking and offer them practical assistance.

Cities in the Asia-Pacific region can substantially improve the situation of victims by focusing and sharing experiences on the issue of protection and reintegration of survivors.

Human security is a concept that encompasses virtually all aspects of our life. It is also a concept inseparably related to human rights and human development. Human trafficking, the topic of this workshop, is only one of the wide-ranging issues of human security, but it is a topic worth addressing, especially with the victim-first approach.

Learning Objectives

- To increase awareness on human security and human trafficking, especially protection of victims, in the region
- To identify key challenges and recognize bad/good practices and lessons learned to protect victims at the local level
- To develop action plans for local implementation and follow-up of lessons learned (via city-to-city cooperation, awareness raising activities, inter-governmental coordination, and other practical implementation examples)

UNITAR's CityShare Methodology will be applied during this workshop to manage knowledge exchange and transfer of lessons learned.

The CityShare methodology aims at optimizing peer learning between local officials. It consists of various processes of self-assessment, distillation and transmission of experiences and good practices. It is also composed of several tools which provide a common framework for the evaluation of experiences made by the participating cities and offer a common language for the exchange and assimilation of the experiences, as well as a roadmap for action and progress.
